Channel 4's Lazarus Speaks At Luncheon

On April 24, the Romulus Community Schools hosted a special luncheon at the Romulus Marriott to honor administrative assistants and secretaries from the district and other area businesses. In all, more than 80 people attended the event, which doubled as a fund-raiser for the Romulus Boys & Girls Club.

Joel R. Carr, Superintendent of Schools, served as master of ceremonies for the festive occasion. Among those he introduced was Dave D'Annunzio, Chairperson of the Boys & Girls Club Advisory Council, who thanked the large gathering for their support.

Guest speaker Lila Lazarus, news anchor and Good Health reporter for WDIV-Channel 4, discussed ways that people can help themselves stay cancer-free. Despite the serious subject, her effective use of humor soon had everyone laughing. Lazarus was quick to point out that laughter is an important element of good health.

Also among the afternoon's highlights was a presentation by the school district's "Fishettes" – a team of executive secretaries who have become expert in using the four basic principles of the famous Fish! motivational philosophy to entertain and inform others. "Fishettes" Carole Bales, Ellen Bragg, Louise Briody, Connie Knight, Robin Omey, and Lorraine Wilkerson got everyone to join in the fun as they sang, danced, and awarded prizes to those who excelled at hula-hoop, jump-rope, and baton-twirling games, as well as a trivia quiz about famous TV secretaries.

"Fishette" Ellen Bragg performed a Bette Midler classic that she "customized" for the occasion, changing the lyrics to explain how secretaries are the wind beneath the wings of their bosses. She also led the gathering in a spirited version of "Born In The USA" as a tribute to the events of September 11, and sang "9 to 5" and "She Works Hard For The Money" to Lila Lazarus and the secretaries, respectively.

Many of the guests enjoyed the opportunity to talk to Lazarus, and took advantage of several photo opportunities with her.

Still other attractions at the luncheon were special hand massages, make-overs, and psychic readings.

The luncheon raised approximately $1,500 for the Romulus Boys & Girls Club. □

Letter to the Editor

Ex-coach Says Thanks for Support

I would like to thank all the people in Romulus who supported my basketball teams and me over the last nine years.

To all my past players, thank you for your hard work and loyalty to our coaching staff, our program, and me. You fine young men were the reason our program was very highly rated in the state.

I would also like to give special thanks to Jesse Meriweather, my athletic director and friend, for his loyalty and his courage to stand up for what he believed was right. To Paula Smith, our athletic secretary: I can never thank you enough for all of your kindness and assistance.

Thanks to Dan Hurst, Principal of Romulus High School, and Al Wilkerson, Principal of Community High School, who were two of our biggest supporters when we won and when we lost.

Thanks to all of the coaches who always gave me words of encouragement and thanks to all of the custodial personnel, especially Bill Garland and Alvin Dupree, who were always there when I needed their help.

To all the people who felt that they should attack my coaching ability and my character, I say only this:

BEYOND

There beyond the petty frustrations,
There beyond the incalculable satisfaction,
There beyond the walls of hate,
There beyond the barriers erected,
There beyond the scalding sarcasm
There beyond the ever-mounting expectations,
Far beyond the continual envy,
Far beyond the lustful pursuits,
Far beyond the venomous lies,
Beyond the precious self-esteem,
Beyond ... I saw my Soul.

"I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:
And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
And answer'd "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell."

— The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam

In closing, let me just say that, for the most part, I very much enjoyed my coaching days at Romulus, and I wish good fortune in the future to everyone who supported our program.

Remembering you always,
Coach Guy Del Giudice □

Chemical Awareness Week: May 5–11

By Margaret Leduc, Director, Emergency Management, City of Romulus

Chemicals are a natural and important part of our environment. Even though we often don't think about it, we use chemicals every day. They can be found in our kitchens, medicine cabinets, basements, and garages, as well as at work. Chemicals help us keep our food fresh and our bodies clean. They help our plants grow and fuel our cars. Chemicals keep our household machines running. Chemicals make it possible for us to live longer, healthier lives.

A chemical emergency arises when chemicals are used improperly or are spilled accidentally. Some chemicals that are safe, and even helpful in small amounts, can be harmful in larger quantities or under unsafe conditions. Most chemical accidents occur in our homes and they can be prevented. Incidents at the workplace or in transportation to the workplace also can be prevented or contained.

Read the label. Information about potentially dangerous products can be found on their labels. Read the labels carefully. For accidental poisoning, some product labels identify antidotes that involve drinking water or milk to flush your system, while others recommend immediate medical attention. Keep your home stocked with appropriate antidotes for cleaners and germicides, deodorizers, detergents, drain and bowl bleaches, liquid fuels, and paint removers and thinners. At work, employers must keep relevant Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS's) in a location where employees can review them. MSDS's have useful information about chemicals used, such as the manufacturer's phone number and safety information.

Keep all medicines out of sight and reach of children. Along with medicines, keep cleaning products and other household chemicals out of sight and reach of children and animals. The most common home chemical emergencies involve small children eating medicines. Children associate the shapes and colors of medicine with candy. Animals are drawn to the sweet smell of anti-freeze. Experts in the field of chemical manufacturing suggest that moving hazardous materials out of sight could eliminate up to 75% of all poisonings of small children.

Store household chemicals properly. Store household chemicals according to the instructions on their labels. Nonfood products should be stored tightly closed in their original containers so that you can always identify the contents of each container and how to use the product properly. Also note if the product is to be stored away from heat or extreme cold.

Properly store chemicals in the workplace. Remember that labeling storage cabinets in the workplace is as important as labeling the chemicals' individual containers. If a chemical is purchased in a large amount to be repackaged into smaller containers, it is important that the smaller containers be labeled, as well.

Avoid mixing. Some combinations of products, such as ammonia and chlorine bleach, can create toxic gas. Other mixtures of chemicals could create a product that would be an unknown chemical, and therefore the dangers and the antidotes for that chemical also would be unknown.

Always read the directions. This is important before using any product. To avoid inhaling a product's dangerous vapors, do not use it in a confined space, such as a small room. Other products should be used with gloves and eye protection to help prevent chemicals from touching the body. In the workplace, pertinent information will be found not only on the container, but also on the MSDS's.

If you should spill a chemical, clean it up immediately. Use a rag to clean up the spilled chemical and be careful to protect your eyes and skin. Allow the fumes in the rag to evaporate outdoors in a safe place, then dispose of it by wrapping it in newspaper and placing it in a sealed plastic bag. Dispose of these materials with your trash. If a spill happens at the workplace, notify a supervisor who will be able to identify the proper procedures for cleanup.

Buy only as much as you need. Buying smaller amounts eliminates the problem of storing extra. Many companies are now following this procedure. This reduces the amount of product to be reported, stored, and potentially wasted. Companies are also looking at using less hazardous chemicals for their needs.

Purchase and learn how to use an A-B-C rated fire extinguisher. Should chemicals ignite, you will have an opportunity to extinguish the fire before it spreads, avoiding greater damage.

Keep the phone number for the Poison Control Center near the telephone so that it is readily available in an emergency. The number is 1-800-764-7661.

Chemicals are used by everyone. Safety should be a part of everyone's responsibility, too. □

Mr. Warren Goes To China

By Steve Jones, Director of Public Relations, City of Romulus

Oliver Warren has seen more of the world than many people can ever claim. England, France, Germany, and Korea are among the countries where Warren has left his footprints in the soil and his imprint on Time. He has also seen more of the world at some of its most dangerous and defining moments in history, which is more than many people might ever have the courage for.

As an Army Engineer assigned to the Combat Battalion – "We Build & Fight" – Oliver Warren saw the beginnings of what became known as the Cold War: the escalating political and border tensions between what was then the USSR and the United States. As a radio operator, he and his unit were ordered to stay at least three miles away from the new, unsafe border of a quickly emerging Soviet satellite: East Germany.

"There was a concern that we could be captured by the Soviets," said Warren. "The Army was very sensitive to having radio personnel so close to the border. The thought was that the Soviets might think we were transmitting into or receiving transmissions from their new territory. That made us prime targets for capture."

Warren's battle against Communist rule later took him from the barricades of East Germany to the Korean War.

There are victories that some warriors must wait for more than a year to celebrate. More than a decade. More than a generation. For Oliver Warren, nearly forty years had to pass for him to see the Berlin Wall – perhaps the most well-known physical manifestation of Communist rule – reduced to rubble in 1989. It was a fine victory for a man who had seen the concrete and barbed-wire border in its terrible infancy.

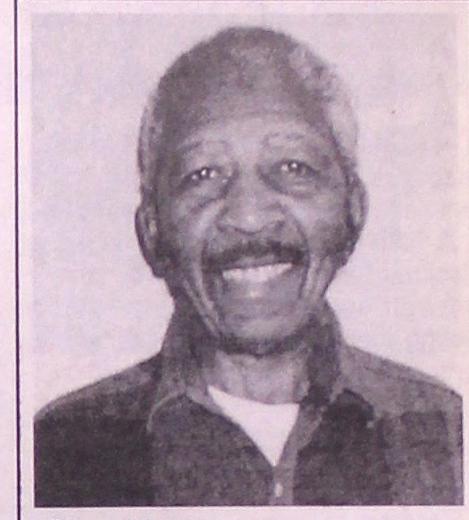

Now, Oliver Warren is about to embark on a new adventure in yet another country – one that he didn't plan, but is certainly welcome, all the same. Warren is going to China. And Northwest Airlines is paying for him to go.

Along with Geraldine Warren, one of his seven grown children, Warren attended the gala grand opening of the new $1.2-billion McNamara Terminal at Metro Airport. Before going to the event, his daughter suggested that he leave his trademark pocketful of pens at home.

"She said security was going to be tight," Warren said with a smile, "and that she didn't want all my pens setting off any alarms."

When they arrived at the new terminal, they joined a swell of several thousand other people curious about the new terminal and anxious to fill out entry forms for a free trip.

"Going into the new terminal, I teased my daughter and said, 'See? I don't have my good pens with me. How'm I supposed to fill out an entry form?'"

Oliver Warren

Warren made do with an old, nearly drained plastic pen he managed to slip past his daughter's security systems.

"We were standing there, people crushed together, waiting for Sonny Elliot to announce the winner of the Northwest trip to Beijing, China," Warren recalled. "I turned to my daughter and said, 'He's going to say 'Oliver Warren.'" We laughed. Then, less than thirty seconds later, Elliot drew the ticket and said, 'Our winner is Oliver Warren!' People around me were stunned. A couple of them turned to me and said, 'How did you know your name was going to be called?' I just told them that I knew. Some days, a person knows more than they ever thought possible. Guess that was my particular day for knowing."

Warren will be taking a Northwest flight to China later this year.

"I'm looking forward to seeing the Forbidden City and the Great Wall," he said.

While most people might cringe at the thought of having to sit through endless hours of their neighbors' vacation slides and videos, quite a few folks in Warren's home town of Romulus are looking forward to seeing his. Warren was the City of Romulus's Director of Cable TV Services for eleven years and is an accomplished cameraman.

"I'll be taking a much smaller video camera than I'm used to working with," he said with a wry smile.

Warren is not a man given to bragging or boasting. He's a quiet, thoughtful man whose humor can catch a person off guard. Someone whose kindness and generosity has been acknowledged by many in the Romulus community. It is someone like this whom people can look at and, with a sigh of relief, say, "Finally. A good guy wins."

When asked a final question about how he feels going to a land so far away to visit a culture that some might feel is equally distant, Warren gave characteristic, considered thought, then said, "It's a big world out there. It's always nice to get out and see a piece of it."

Bon voyage, Mr. Warren. □
